What is Acupuncture?

Acupuncture is one of the oldest recorded forms of medicine having been used for over 3,000 years in China. Although often described as a means of pain relief, it is in fact used to treat people with a wide range of illnesses. The important thing is that it does work and that side effects are extremely rare. When these fine needles are inserted, any sensation is usually temporary mild discomfort at most. Research has shown that 70% of people gain relief with acupuncture, even when more conventional medicine has failed.

Acupuncture and physiotherapy combined can be used to treat a wide range of conditions. At PremierPhysio all therapists practicing acupuncture are members of the Acupuncture Association of Chartered Physiotherapists and are bound by a code of professional conduct. In addition to pain relief, we treat with acupressure in the ear to aid: smoking cessation, dieting, insomnia and stress.
